

STORM DAMAGE —

Hurricane Irma took 7 million cable and wireline subscribers offline

Untold number of Internet outages persist in South Florida after Hurricane Irma

AT&T and Comcast, the largest Internet service providers in South Florida refuse to Specify the number of outages in the area

No internet after Hurricane Irma means no work and no fun. When will I be online again?

Comcast and AT&T reporting tens of thousands are offline

Internet out. Cable out. What are providers saying about when services will be restored?

Internet providers struggle to bring services back online in Florida

STORM SEASON

When Disaster Strikes Will Your Business Continue to Operate?

Cell towers are built to withstand strong hurricane force winds and have generators for backup power.

Cell phone carriers can set up emergency command centers and deploy specialty mobile equipment that can create temporary cellular networks.

